Call for Paper Proposals

The Harvard Celtic Department cordially invites proposals for papers on topics which relate directly to Celtic studies (Celtic languages and literatures in any phase; cultural, historical or social science topics; theoretical perspectives, etc.) for the 32nd Annual Celtic Colloquium, to take place at Harvard University, October 5-7, 2012. Papers concerning interdisciplinary research with a Celtic focus are also invited. Attendance is free.

Presentations should be no longer than twenty minutes. There will be a short discussion period after each paper. Papers given at the Colloquium may later be submitted for consideration by the editorial committee for publication in the Proceedings of the Harvard Celtic Colloquium.

Potential presenters should send a 200-250 word abstract, plus a brief biographical sketch. Submissions should be sent by e-mail to hcc@fas.harvard.edu, faxed, or posted to the departmental address; we encourage submissions in the form of RTF or Word Document email attachments.

Further information available at our website: http://www.hcc.fas.harvard.edu

Closing date for proposals: May 1, 2012.

The John V. Kelleher Lecture
Poetics and the Bardic Imagination
~ delivered by ~

Pádraig A. Breathnach
Senior Professor and Director
School of Celtic Studies
Dublin Institute for Advanced Studies

Thursday, October 4th, at 5 p.m.
Harvard Faculty Club Library,
20 Quincy Street, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Additional information can be found on our website: www.hcc.fas.harvard.edu